

Call to keep NZ spud ban

THE South Australian potato industry has urged the Federal Government to continue its suspension of potato imports from New Zealand because of the serious risk of disease.

At a Senate inquiry hearing in Canberra yesterday, Potatoes South Australia chief executive Robbie Davis said Biosecurity Australia needed to improve its knowledge of a range of aspects relating to the disease threat.

Ms Davis backed requests for a wider scientific panel.